Best relief map of Europe is one which would have all evidences of Hitlerism removed.
First words heard on the telephone were spoken in 1876 and it seems as though that woman on the party line hasn't been off it since.
A seven-ton stone-crusher stolen from a Michigan gravel pit is enough to make the deed weigh heavily on anybody's conscience.
Japanese and French forces were battling at a place called Dong Dang, which sounds as though they came out fighting at the bell.
Councilman in a Cleveland suburb was selected from a hat, which he probably will start talking through in usual councilmanic fashion.

To Sea in a Parachute
RAF Officer Describes First Forced Jump
AP Feature Service
LONDON—This is how an RAF flying officer described his first parachute jump in action:
"I was in a mild—floating down so peacefully in the cool breeze. I had to remind myself to open my parachute. When the first jerk was over, I swung like a pendulum, but I soon settled down and I was able to enjoy a full view of the beach some miles. There was no sensation of speed. But the ripples on the water became bigger. The soldiers on the beach came nearer.
"I had one minute of anxiety. As I floated down one of the Messerschmitts appeared. The pilot circled round me and I was just a little alarmed, but he behaved quite well. He opened his hood, waved to me, and then dived towards the sea and made off towards France.
"The wind was carrying me, in towards the beach. I took out my cigarettes and lit one without any difficulty. As I came nearer to the coast I could hear the all-clear sirens—and passing over the houses on the sea front I could see the people coming out of their shelters—people looking up at me.
"The soldiers' faces were quite clear but I must have looked English even at 1,000 feet—which was comforting.
"For the first time since the pilot circled around me I became anxious. Was I to end my escapade by being bungle against a seawall villa? The journey ended in a cucumber frame—after I had pushed myself free of a house with my foot."
The average height of the earth's land above sea level is 2,300 feet.

Lunch Boxes for School
Wholesome Foods Guard Johnny, Mary's Health
By MRS. ALEXANDER GEORGE
AP Feature Service Writer
The right kind of lunches will get the children off to a good start in school this fall.
Appetizing, wholesome and well-balanced foods will guard Johnny's and Mary's health and help them elick in classes. Very important is the careful packing. First sight of the noon-day meal should be appetite-coaxing.
Now let's fill the lunch box. One hot food is essential. Mother keeps this in mind when she is preparing the home meals. She saves out some stew, Spanish rice, creamed or scalloped chicken, meat or vegetables or soup. She cools it, covers it carefully and stores it in the refrigerator. Later it is reheated, poured into a well-sterilized vacuum jar, and away it goes to school.
Reserve another vacuum jar or bottle for milk or cocoa. When these jars are brought home after school, rinse well with boiling water. When time to fill again, sterilize with boiling water. Rinse the milk jar with cold water before filling.
Spread whole bread slices with butter, cottage cheese or any mild spread. Arrange in sandwich fashion and wrap in waxed paper. Crisp carrot and celery sticks, or chunks of cabbage lettuce or other greens give extra minerals and vitamins.
If the lunch box has a cool storage spot at school, include some cold chicken or meat, hard-cooked eggs, salad or baked custard. Place in paper cups with tightly fitting lids.
All lunch boxes want fruits. Vary the fruits for extra nutrition. Pears, peaches, apricots, grapes, bananas and oranges give quite an assortment.

24 of America's Greatest Authors Tell What AMERICA Means to Them
Twenty-second of 24 articles on "Our Country," written exclusively for NEA Service by the nation's most famous authors.
Author of "Mether Knows Best," "Show Boat," "Cimarron," etc.
Everybody wants to belong. From birth our instinct is to join with someone or something that will sustain and reassure us.
While we're infants we want to belong to our parents and our home. To these we cling for physical and economic and mental support. Then we branch out in a search for further assurance. We join a school, a gang, a club, a guild, a religious sect, a business group, a profession, a union. And we work for them.
"How we work for them," we Americans are the greatest joiners in the world. Perhaps it's our newness and our feeling of insecurity that makes this so. But it is true. And how we work for our own group. We pay dues, we pay special assessments, we plan benefits, build places of meeting, try to gain new members, vote, appoint or elect officers, criticize, praise, talk shop. We belong. Lawyers, doctors, writers, artisans, engineers, teachers, students, laborers, designers, merchants—how we love to belong!
But that biggest club of all, that vast and inclusive union to which every one of us belongs—that one we have lately got into the habit of treating with neglect, or contempt, or disrespect or mere carelessness. The strongest and most sustaining organization in the world, to which we here in America have been privileged to affiliate ourselves, has been allowed, by the great majority of us, to get along as best it could without our help.
That club, union, guild, home, religion is known as the United States of America. Its dues are called taxes, its officers are called president, senator, congressman, governor, mayor, and many more titles. Its passwords are freedom and liberty and equality, and the organization lives up to its slogan, though its individual members frequently do not.
Its members keep pushing fellow-members in the face. They want to belong, but they don't want to work at it. So, then, little by little, with magnificent help from Hitler and Stalin, we have built a fine machine of destruction. We have bred a gang of destroyers to destroy our guild, our union. One section of the country has been stirred up against another; religion has been set against religion, class against class, national origin against national origin.
The very worst thing that could possibly happen to Hitler would be to see a United States of America. There are certain things I've seen and seen in the past five or ten years, and I'm sick of seeing them. I'm resentful of seeing labor set against labor, two camps defying each other through their power-hungry leaders. Why does labor, as one man, stand up on its legs and say which it wants and what it wants, and then function again as the thing it truly is—the most vital muscle in the whole body of America—the heart that pumps the life blood through the United States.
The vast majority of us hate the plan on which the German government is conducted, we despise the conduct of the Italian dictator and his crew. We have here in the United States, according to recent and reliable figures, between 15 and 20 million of Germans and about 5 millions of Italians. They and their children aren't here because they found Germany and Italy too perfect. They came because they wanted their own country. And with very few exceptions they want to belong. With deep sincerity they want to belong. But there is this strange new Hitler-spawned tendency to call them foreigners.
What are we all but foreigners? What is a foreigner in America? Albert Einstein? Paul Robeson? Thomas Mann? Jascha Heifetz? Carl Schurz? Or are the foreigners exemplified in those countless millions who, over the past century, have built the railroads that criss-cross the country, the skyscrapers that are the original architectural form produced by us here? The reservoirs that furnish our water supply, the mammoth dams that make the building of the Egyptian Pyramids seem child's play done with blocks, the great steel ingots turned out white-hot in the steel mills, all, all done by the toiling hands of refugees.
For they were refugees, though they may not have come to America in war time. They came here for refuge from oppression or poverty, or persecution, or militarism, or some form of frustration. They came, and they want to belong, and they have the right to belong. Some are strong in talent and in intellect; some are strong in rascals. We need them as much as they need us. More! They want to join the club and pay their dues and vote. And if we don't welcome them to these privileges then

SERIAL STORY

THIS COULD BE YOUR STORY

BY MARGUERITE GAHAGAN

Copyright, 1940, NEA Service, Inc.

All characters, organizations and incidents in this serial are entirely fictitious.

YESTERDAY Sue Mary returned to the office, and stars and young Clark. Vera telephoned Nick, telling him the plot was worked, that they got the papers to frame Clark tomorrow. Joe is hurt in a fight at the factory. He is now in the hospital. The story is told by the sudden sweep of events.

VERA LOSES A GLOVE

CHAPTER XXII

It was impossible, then in the routine work-a-day office, to forget the terror of the night before. Sue Mary mechanically typed and filed and took dictation. She listened to Babs Fleming burst forth in confidential, whispered details of her trousseau shopping and tried desperately to force an answering smile and a faint show of interested enthusiasm in Babs' wedding plans.

"Gosh, Sue Mary, I'm so excited. Only a month—but it seems ages to wait. Jim's so sweet. He's so interested in everything we're getting for the house. He was over last night and we got everything out and looked it over again; for the umpteenth time, I guess.

"Sometimes I think it will be worth it before we really get settled. I mean things like linens and china and silver. Gosh—I'm so in love."

Her blue eyes were dreamy and she went off into one of her periodic day dreams, while Sue Mary felt fear convulse her own heart. She should be able to dream such dreams herself instead of sitting here now with icy terror gripping her.

She had already called the hospital three times and each call had brought her no new information. There was still little encouragement to give, except that he was holding his own and doing as well as could be expected.

She closed her eyes and tried to remember how it had felt to be in his arms, with his lips close to hers; how she had put herself to sleep, planning on what their home would be like.

She looked up and saw Kitty typing with flying fingers and casting sidelong bitter glances at Vera, cool and tailored today in a white pique sports dress. Vera was more self-possessed than usual this morning. She worked quietly and efficiently with no wasted motion.

Vera had her own course clearly outlined and she gave no hint of what she planned to do in the evening.

Sue Mary wondered if she felt any fear, sensed any possible danger. But then she, too, was in love. Natalie had pointed that out. She was in love with Nick and so blinded by that love that to do what he asked was all that mattered.

Kitty walked over to Vera's desk. Sue Mary saw her toss something on it and then heard her say, "You must have lost this when you were here last night."

Vera turned, but Sue Mary couldn't see her face. "Mine?" she said in a low voice with that husky note. "What are you talking about?"

"Don't give me that business," Kitty said sharply. "You know what I mean. You should know better than to leave telltale evidence."

Sue Mary swung around in her chair and looked at the girls. Vera was holding a white lace glove in her hands. And her face was a study of absorption.

"You're being melodramatic," she said, evenly.

"No, you are. I know what I'm talking about. I know what you're up to. You've been trying to hook Ross Clark from the first moment you set eyes on him. And you've played this high-and-mighty lady act, too. Last night you were here with him. In his father's office. You think you're pretty clever. But you aren't. You're not half clever enough."

Vera laughed. "Well, I made the grade and you didn't. Why not confess that's really what bothers you? You tried, but Ross Clark couldn't even see you. And certainly I don't have to make excuses to you for my presence here last night with him. This is his office as well as his father's."

"Only I have my doubts if he knew where he was or whom he was with," Kitty answered furiously. "Just what are you trying to do?"

"My dear, you simply wouldn't understand," Vera told her quietly. "And I haven't the time or the inclination to draw any diagrams for you. If you must know, however, Ross dropped in here for some papers on our way to dinner."

SUE MARY wondered later just what might have happened at that point if Miss Grant hadn't come into the office.

"It's a good thing you went out to take that stuff from Mr. Clark last night," she told Sue Mary.

rolling around on the floor of the stage. The beaming producer had been standing at Hope's side awaiting an introduction. Hope kept on chatting, so the flustered Goldwyn gestured for the microphone. Hope leaned farther away, and Goldwyn reached for it. Hope lay down on the stage and said, "All right, if you're so anxious, come on down and get it!" So the big movie-maker lay flat on his dignity and scuffled for the mike.

The famous producer finally made his speech. But Hope had the last word: "Mr. Goldwyn has been wonderful on this trip. And, as you can see, the trip has been wonderful on Mr. Goldwyn."

In spite of his activities, Bob and Dolores Hope maintain a sort of home life. They have a one-year-old adopt-

Revival Meet

Continues

Large Crowds Attend the Methodist Revival

Large crowds continue to greet the pastor, Reverend Kenneth Spore, at the Methodist church for the Revival Meeting. The response from the membership has been unusually good and already there have been many accessions to the Church.

Rev. Spore's sermons deal with problems in practical, everyday living, and with human relationships as they exist today. Mr. Martin has proven a decided asset to the success of the meeting. His leadership in the song service is an inspiration to the entire congregation and much good has come from this part of the service.

Services will continue this week at the regular hours, 10:00 in the morning and 7:30 in the evening. The Young Peoples Meetings under the leadership of Mr. Martin have been increasing in interest and numbers.

The after school meeting—the hour of which is four o'clock—also finds a large number of boys and girls waiting for Mr. Martin. The Young Peoples Meeting at 8:40 will continue through the week, as well as the after school meetings.

Bob, the Indestructible Hope, Trains For Roles by Dashing Around the Nation

HOLLYWOOD—I hope Bob Hope is still bobbing around when you read this, because I want to write a little tribute to the saddle-nosed, lean, amiable Iron Man of the Movies.

Last time I saw him was at the end of the serial excursion for "The Westerner" premier in Texas. As about 30 of us left our planes to go home and do a Rip Van Winkle for a week, Mr. Hope breezed away amid gay quips to keep a golf date and then to work on a new script. Of course, he may have fallen to pieces as soon as he got around the first corner.

Unquestionably, Bob Hope is the busiest master-of-ceremonies, personal-appearance maker, screen actor, radio performer and benefit player who ever lived. His immediate schedule includes a week at the San Francisco Auto Show and five days with the Warner Brothers' expedition to South Bend, Ind., for the "Knute Rockne" premiere. Those chores will brighten him up for his role, with Bing Crosby, in "The Road to Zanzibar."

The comedian does all such things effortlessly, loves to do 'em. If nobody would pay him thousands of dollars a week, he'd do them for dimes. He now has to turn down lots of big offers, but he'll still play a charity benefit at the drop of a hint.

On this "Westerner" trip to Fort Worth and Dallas, Hope landed after a sleepless night and for two days and nights mastered every ceremony in an event-filled marathon. He played four theatres preceding showings of the picture, officiated at five broadcasts, took over the microphone at

Bruce Catton Says:
By BRUCE CATTON, NEA Washington Correspondent
Aid-to-Britain Bloc Urges Sale of Only Unused 'Flying Forts'
WASHINGTON—Contrary to what you may have heard, nobody in particular is trying to get the U. S. government to give Great Britain the 50-craft "flying fortresses" now in the service of the army air corps.
What is being attempted, especially by the William Allen White committee—is to make available to Britain the flying fortresses which are now under construction for the U. S. army. The understanding is that about a dozen of these giant bombers are now ready for delivery, with approximately 70 more due to be finished by Jan. 1. The White committee hopes that the administration can be persuaded to release the manufacturers so that these planes may be sent to Britain to fight against the delivery of planes now in service, not is asking that the famous bomb sight be turned over.
Importance of these huge bombers to Britain is that they would make intensive bombing of Berlin and other German cities much easier, because of their long range and great carrying capacity.
Memo: Look for a concerted drive this winter to modify the neutrality law and repeal the Johnson act banning loans to foreign governments which haven't paid their World War debts. Understanding is that before so terribly long the British will run out of ready cash. A big push to make credit available will then be in order.
You're Fired! Here's Why—
Files of the Social Security Board have some odd bits of evidence on the reasons why men get fired from their jobs.
Under the law, a discharged worker is entitled to unemployment compensation unless he is fired for his own misconduct. Files of the board are full of hearings before the various state appeal boards, in which divers ex-workers have sought to show that they were fired through no fault of their own.
Prize case, perhaps, is that of a hotel elevator operator who got let out for giving a fellow employee the "hot foot." He was held not guilty of misconduct; his ex-boss, incidentally, backed his plea.

in arithmetic, the U. S. Housing Authority has $100,000,000 which it doesn't know whether it can use.
Under the original act USHA could lend $300,000,000 on housing, making loans up to 90 per cent of the cost of any project; it could also grant outright subsidy not exceeding 3 1/2 per cent of the total cost of a project.
In setting up the subsidy appropriation, however, somebody figured it as 3 and one-half per cent of the total cost of the total costs. Thus, subsidy money was provided to accompany only 90 per cent of the total project costs. As a result, USHA ran out of subsidy money before its lending authority was exhausted. Potential loans of $100,000,000 were thus frozen up.
Defense commission hopes to have the sum ruled legal for use on defense housing. On that sort of project, USHA can lend 100 per cent of cost; thus the entire sum could be used pronto with no additional subsidy.

Whose Fault Will it Be?
How close the United States may be today to an actual declaration of war will be much better determined by historians 20 years hence.
The people in this country do not want war. They will not let it if it can be avoided with honor. But if congress is forced to meet some black day and declare war against an aggressor nation, it will be neither the people's nor the government's fault; it will be forced into the conflict. Sole responsibility will rest upon the close corporation of Napoleons who have found the rest of the world too small for their pillaging operations.
War in this country can never begin over any one "incident." Rather it will come after an accumulation of indignities, of atrocities, of gestures calculated to indicate a complete lack of respect for the sovereignty of a democratic people. It will come, if it comes, only after the horror that is being inflicted on the innocent becomes too great to be endured even vicariously.
Historians today are well aware that the Lusitania disaster just before our entrance into World War I was not in itself responsible for the United States' decision to get into the fight. It helped to crystallize feeling against Germany, of course. But fundamentally, that antagonism already existed before the boat was torpedoed.
It began in the first year of the war, when German troops cut through Belgium and Holland in complete disregard of international law. This enmity toward Germany was fanned during the next three years by humiliations American craft experienced on the high seas, by reports of submarines lurking in American waters, by the brazen operations of German agents on the American continent.
No one dragged the United States into that war but the Kaiser. At the moment of its beginning, Americans were resigned to neutrality, were not even certain which side they favored.
If the moral support of virtually the whole of the American people means anything, we are already in World War II. As new events unfold, as the dictatorial nations become bolder and sign new treaties to emphasize their right to destruction, hatred for the methods of totalitarianism becomes more intense among Americans. The total defense we have at last

HIGHLIGHTS FROM LATEST BOOKS
Fair Weather Days Over in America, Mumford Warns
Whatever you may read of the current crop of world affairs books, and there is a deluge these days, you must not miss Lewis Mumford's "Fair Weather Days Over in America." This is a clear-cut picture of the military breakdown in Europe, of the leading American nowhere in the hour of crisis. It is also a sort of primer for American life, both national and individual. Anybody who understands at all the nation's heritage must respond to Mr. Mumford's call to action, to wit:
We cannot preserve ourselves against this barbarism and worry about the cost of our effort; we must give beyond the ordinary power of giving. Nor can we insure 7 per cent profits or the eventual redemption of all our bonds and mortgages at a particular time; nor can we hold fast to a particular patent monopoly or a particular hourly wage scale. Only one need counts: the need to save the institutions of a free civilization, the institutions of democracy, founded on a profound respect for the personality of all men, and for a power, not ourselves, that makes for righteousness.
Too late in the war the British and the French discovered how great a sacrifice the danger demanded; the French were unprepared for it until all they valued was indeed churned around and pounced to pieces in the beating waters, until the plates were bucking and the water swamping the undertaken may be the instrument needed to keep us out of war—to keep war away from us. Americans hope it is. But if it becomes necessary to emphasize our devotion to democracy in any other way, we shall be ready.
If that time ever comes, remember—the aggressor nations will have asked for it.

Don Scott Is Versatile Back

Fails at Half, Makes Good as Signal Caller

By JERRY BRONKHORST

NEA Service Staff Correspondent
COLUMBUS, O. — One description of Don Scott is that he is a quarter-back with the soul of a tackle. Another is that every time the Ohio State's 215-pound pace-maker lifts a finger both sidelines are in danger. Regardless of description, all indications are that the Buckeye quarterback is very likely the most versatile back in college gridiron ranks. Already dubbed as the "back of the year," Scott is hailed as the only octagonal threat extant, and is the No. 1 reason why the Scarlet have been established as one of the early season favorites for national honors. Scott started his career as an all-state tackle at Canton McKinley High School, but somehow that didn't appear to be his right position.

Andrew Mellon never was treasurer of the United States. He served as secretary of the treasury under Harding, Coolidge and Hoover.

would up with nine minutes of action in a losing final with Michigan.

On a hunch Francis Schmidt placed him at quarterback in spring practice in 1939, and the change was miraculous. The responsibility of calling signals was like a shot in the arm. An inherent knack for directing was the thing that brought everything else out of him.

Last season he would up an All-Big Ten quarterback and "Bob Zupke" after surveying the ruins of a disastrous meeting with the Bucks called Don Scott the greatest back he had seen in a decade.

Pegged Three Scoring Passes Against Gophers

Although he is one of the finest signal callers in recent Ohio history, Scott's mechanical assets are even more outstanding.

He's a great passer, either at long or short range. He pitched three touchdown passes against Minnesota last year in the Midwest's wildest engagement.

He maintained a punting average of 42 yards—one of the best in the nation.

He punishes a line when he hits it and carries the ball well in the open field.

His 215 pounds makes him a terrific blocker, the kind who flattens his man rather than moves him out of the play.

An accomplished place-kicker he made good 13 out of 15 times a year ago.

He's a smart pass defender and tackles viciously on defense.

"I can't remember a back as dangerous in so many departments of play," says Schmidt. "Only comparison I can make is with Ivan Grove, a tremendously versatile boy I coached at Tulsa University years ago."

Old-timers on High Street have gotten around to mentioning him in the same breath with Chic Harley and on High Street that's something closely akin to sacrifice.

"Willkie" and "Roosevelt" Debate

Refugee Didn't Know Her Mother

When 2-year-old Clarice Bernman, tiny war refugee who traveled all the way from England by herself, got to New York, she didn't recognize her mother, Mrs. Bronislaw Bernman, whom she hadn't seen in six months. They are pictured reunited at LaGuardia Field as the child arrived from Montreal. Her father is a British army captain.

R. M. Budlong Invents Cat-Spanking Machine

SANTA FE, N. M. — Robert M. Budlong hasn't anything against cats in general, but against the cats which are tempted by birds at Morro National Monument he has directed an inventive genius that relegates old shoes and crockery to the horse-and-buggy days.

Budlong has built a "cat spanker" which, he says, protects cats against the baser side of their nature and protects his birds from the cats. He is custodian of the monument.

His spanker consists of a platform in which salmon is placed as bait and an arrangement whereby the weight of an investigating cat releases a bent lath which strikes the animal and sends it tumbling over the salmon and into a metal chute leading to a tub of water.

"The cat emerges at great speed, streaks for the nearest fence and never returns," Budlong explains.

To avoid such inhumane contingencies as splinters or broken bones, Budlong recommends padding the spanking end of the lath with sponge rubber.

"My neighbors tell me their cats have become rather shy," he concludes.

Rye Pest Is Nature's Pet

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE

AP Science Editor
MINNEAPOLIS — If farmers could shield crops from dirty water, darkness and a temperature of 48 to 72 degrees, they could get rid of flag-smut of rye, a serious crop disease in the rye country.

Discovery that these three conditions cause flag-smut to flourish is reported in Phytopathology, the journal of specialists in plant diseases.

The habits of this crop disease were found by growing the smut, independently of rye or other plants, in the laboratory of Dr. E. C. Stakman of the University of Minnesota. The grower was Dr. Lee Ling, who has returned to China.

Dr. Ling found that although the spores, or seeds, of this pest will germinate and grow at 72 degrees, they will not at 80. Nor will they grow at 40, although 48 is all right.

The weather this pest likes is common in the northwest, where rye is sown in the fall.

First Draft to Stand Out

Will be 'Lame Duck' Who Didn't Limp

By JACK STINNETT
WASHINGTON—The lame ducks ordinarily limp out of congress as inconspicuously as possible. Perhaps being a little ashamed for having drawn blanks on the political wheel of fortune, they usually make the period between their re-election failure and the end of their terms one of quiet, sometimes one of complete absence from official duties.

But not so Edward R. Burke. The Democratic senator from Nebraska, who last April lost his race for re-nomination to his one-time political crony, three-time Gov. R. L. Cochran, is going out in a blaze of activity that eclipses anything else in his busy term.

With Senator Austin of Vermont, he teamed to fight against the tax bill provision to assess municipal bonds. As one of the sponsors of the proposed bill to make the presidency a single six-year term, he held hearings before the sub-committee which gave the ardent New Dealers several headaches. He bolted his party and announced that he would campaign for Wendell L. Willkie.

Threatened Filibuster
He dropped a few dark hints that if the senate didn't bring up the house-approved Logan-Walter bill (to permit appeals to courts from rulings of government administrative agencies) there might be a filibuster.

For all of these things, the Gentleman from Nebraska would be well remembered. But he has done more than that. He has written his name in history by being one of the sponsors and the chief senate ramrod of the precedent-shattering Burke-Wadsworth bill, which for the first time in the history of the United States brought peacetime conscription to the young men of America.

It was this that sent me knocking on the Senator's door to find out what manner of man was this who would go flailing the legislative bushes after his electorate had informed him that the hunt was over.

Needed Strong Arm
The "Plattsburg crowd," as they are sometimes called (a group that has constantly advocated military training for defense purposes), had drawn up the military service bill, Rep. Wadsworth (R.-N. Y.) was in the fold and a natural sponsor for the bill in the house. But they needed a strong arm in the senate. They found it in Senator Burke and only a few days after he had been defeated for re-nomination back home.

The Senator says now that it looked like a lost cause, but he believed in it. As a World War veteran he believed in defense preparedness. Vice President Garner, one of his closest friends, told him the bill didn't have a chance before election. Several other senators told him the bill didn't have a chance of coming up at all. But Senator Burke went to work.

Burke fought his bill through and the ink on this column will hardly be dry before the measure is plucking 16,500,000 American sleeves.

Says he is an Amateur
Husky, thin-haired, cigar-smoking and in his 50's, Senator Burke doesn't

Grayson's Scoreboard

Failure to Recall Young Giebell in Time for Him to Be Eligible for World Series One of Few Mistakes Made by Story-Book Detroit Club

By HARRY GRAYSON
NEA Service Sports Editor
Floyd Giebell, who applied the stranger-than-fiction finish to Detroit's story-book American League season, is another striking illustration that too much attention should not be paid to averages.

Giebell, tall and blond and 25, won just one game, while losing nine for Toledo in 1939. He dropped 16 while capturing 15 for Buffalo before being recalled by the Tigers on Sept. 18. Yet Del Baker felt that he was conceding nothing to the great Bob Feller and the Indians when he started Giebell in the final series in Cleveland. Baker didn't want to lead with Lynwood Rowe, the only first-string pitcher who was ready. With only one victory needed to clinch the pennant, he decided to hold Schoolboy Rowe in reserve . . . to be sent against someone slightly less formidable than Feller on a good afternoon.

But the Detroit manager wasn't surrendering to Feller. Anyone attached to the Detroit club will tell you that one of the few mistakes made by the Tigers this year was their not bringing in Giebell in time to make him eligible for the world series. Indeed, the Giebell watching the series from the stand may be the best pitcher on the Detroit payroll.

Giebell was developed at Salem College, a Baptist institution situated in the West Virginia town of that name and as a member of the Weirton, West Va., Steel Co. team.

The late Billy Doyle picked up Giebell for the Tigers in 1937, after he had bagged two of three starts and the national semi-professional championship for the Weirton Steelers at Dayton, O.

Giebell ran into bad Toledo and Buffalo clubs after being a 20-game winner for Evansville of the Three B's in 1938.

He lost a string of games by one run with Toledo, as the Mud-hens kicked in three runs for every one scored and finished 23 games in arrears. He dropped 10 games by one run for the sixth-place Buffalo Bisons, who were crippled by injuries. Detroit started Giebell three days know exactly why all this has happened. He refers to himself as an amateur in politics. He came into the senate (he served one term in the House, 1932-34) a staunch New Dealer. It was he who formulated that definition of the New Deal which still is President Roosevelt's favorite, the one that starts "The New Deal is an old deal—as old as the earliest aspirations of humanity . . . and liberty and justice and the good life. But he has been a bitter opponent of the Supreme Court battle, fought the 1938 "purge" and a dozen other measures but has strung along with the New Deal on just as many more.

Senator Burke hasn't decided yet what he will do after January, but whatever it is, he thanks he will continue to be a lawyer by profession and an "amateur" in politics. He lives in Omaha.

Army Sets Up Clearing House

Conscripts to Be Placed in Suited Departments

By JACK STINNETT
WASHINGTON — If the Army has its way, there'll be no square pegs in round holes when the new "selectees" are inducted into the service. (The Army never refers to "drafts" or "conscripts" or to the "draft" or "conscription"—the present program, they'll have you know, is Selective Service and the men are Selectees.)

There are so many different classifications of service that it would take more than the length of this column merely to list them. To see that bakers bake and butchers butcher and typists type, the War Department has worked out an elaborate system of check and double-check tests and questionnaires to find just who is a square peg and who a round-one.

World war experience taught the military men that sorting manpower in accordance with its most effective qualifications could be something more than a major problem. Even after months of service, entire units were disrupted because it was discovered that men were doing work for which they were not best fitted. Men who could shoe a mare were peeling potatoes and mending a little bit. Expert bookkeepers were building bridges. The end of it, of course, was wholesale transfers, wasted time, and frozzled tempers.

There'll Be a Reception

To get around this in 1940-41, the Army is going about it scientifically. The business will start in the Reception Centers. (These high sounding names almost have us down.) A "Reception Center" is merely a three or four day clearing house. The "Replacement Center" is camp No. 1, where the boys will get their first taste of toughening, one-two-three-four, wearing the old uniform, saluting Shavetail Jones and rolling out for 6:15 reveille.

At the Reception Centers the government insurance policies will be issued, vaccinations and inoculations given, and the classification tests and interviews completed.

Don't ask me exactly what these tests and interviews are, because the forms aren't out yet and the Army these days is not telling any secrets in advance. They'll consist of obtaining all the information about aptitudes and experience. If a man's an A-1 plumber, but with a real or imagined yen for flying, it'll be up to the test commission and interviewers to find out if he had better stick after he checked in from Buffalo, and he beat the A's 13-2, yielding only three real hits.

Floyd Giebell has the required speed and a sharp curve, a fade-away, and control.

"But the biggest thing in his favor," says Catcher Billy Sullivan, "is that he isn't afraid to throw the right ball even when he's behind the batter."

Del Baker and Detroit scouts knew the averages didn't tell the whole truth about Floyd Giebell.

Girl Is a Shark at Catching Sharks

SOUTHPORT, N. C. — (AP) — When Winifred Mae Roberts, 19, chartered a boat to go shark fishing lookers-on were amused but after 15 minutes of battle with a fast moving shark she showed unmistakable signs of being an expert.

Then heading the rod to one of the party she dispatched the shark with a .30 calibre rifle.

1st Baptist

Sam R. Hamilton, Hope pastor: "We will have charge of the music throughout the meeting. An effort is being made to secure the attendance of every resident member of First Baptist church upon some service during the first week of the Revival."

Services will be held at 9:30 each morning and 7:30 each evening. Prayer meetings will be held by young people and adults at 7:00 o'clock each evening.

to his pipes or soar in the blue.

Double Advantage Cited
The result, the Army thinks, will be two-fold. It'll give some of the boys an opportunity to shine in positions in which they are best suited and happiest; and it may straighten out a lot of misfits in life and discover hidden talents that not even the men themselves suspect they have.

After they are run through the Reception Centers, the men will be assigned to regular Army units, to National Guard units or to Replacement Centers. Since the Army feels that the last method—keeping the selectees together and putting them through a few months of intensive hardening and training in fundamentals of Army routine, it is likely that most of the men who answer the call after October 16 will find themselves in these Replacement camps.

There is one other phase of the whole business which the Army at present refuses to discuss and that is that even though Johnny Doe is one of the 40-10-1 shots called in the first quota of 400,000, he has almost an even chance that he won't be packing a gun.

There are the medical corps, the veterinary corps, the dental corps, the hospital corps, the engineering corps, the quartermaster corps, the clerical forces, the cooks and mechanics and scores of others. All of these are just as vital to an army as the men who fire the little guns and big ones and no army of a million men could be half prepared if it failed to develop these branches to the fullest.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

PICTURES IN THE MIRROR

The mirror not only encouraged the cat to start a boxing match with himself—but also helped give a better picture, showing both back and front view. Try mirror shots—they're fun.

AN argument is more interesting if both sides get a fair break—and it lasts longer. The same rule applies to many snapshot subjects. Put a mirror in the picture, to show both back and front of your subject—and your picture will have twice as much to tell.

It's no trouble to take snapshots of this type—so long as you have your subject close to the glass. Just focus for the distance from mirror to camera, use a small lens opening—and both the subject and its reflection will be sharp.

However, as the subject backs away from the glass, the reflection also backs away—in the opposite direction. In other words, it gets farther away from the camera. Therefore, to get the reflection sharp, you must do a bit of simple addition before you focus. Just measure the distance from camera to mirror, add the distance from subject to mirror—and set the focusing scale for the sum of these distances.

As an example: suppose the camera is six feet from the mirror, and the subject two feet from the mirror. Then, if you want the sharp est possible picture of the reflection, set the focus at eight feet. To get both reflection and subject sharp, use a very small lens opening and focus at the mirror—in this case, six feet.

Before shooting a "mirror" picture, check the position of your photo lights. These have to be to one side of the subject, in most cases. Be sure that the shades are turned so that light does not shine on the camera lens, and also see that the mirror does not reflect an image of the lights into the camera.

In addition to wall mirrors, doors, and the like, try pictures of reflections in a mirror-bottomed tray or table. You can get some extremely good angle shots in this manner, and they add interest to your snapshot collection.
